

BISNOW

(ALMOST) NEVER BORING

July 26, 2018

Link to Article

16 Commercial Real Estate Execs on Why They Love City Skylines (Part 1)

There is a reason the commercial real estate industry is infatuated with skylines — they are energizing, allowing professionals to experience the buzz of the office on weekdays and the excitement of nightlife during the weekend. Buildings that touch the skyline serve as places to live, to work and to play. They are places to grab coffee in the morning and wine in the evening. They show off a moment in time, with snippets of the past and the future buzzing around.

Take a look at some of the memorable skyline views around the country, and read why these 16 commercial real estate execs love to look at them.

“You kind of feel the energy of the city, but when you look at the skyline view, I think that really resonates with people. We’re a social species, and we thrive off the energy of others. The city is the best environment to feel that energy. The skyline view kind of triggers that emotion.”

— ATCO Properties & Management Development Director Tommy Mann