NY Office Adds Casimiro, Promotes Huber

ATCO Properties & Management has promoted Ryan Huber and hired Joao Casimiro in the Manhattan-based investment and ownership platform's Glendale, NY office.

In their new roles, Huber and Casimiro will be responsible for sourcing and closing new transactions across the company's national commercial real estate portfolio with a focus on value-add retail, office and mixed-use properties.

The two vice presidents of acquisitions will work alongside the firm's acquisitions team led by Damon Hemmerdinger, co-president and Neil Adamson, senior vice president of finance and acquisitions.

"We are proud to elevate Ryan within the company and welcome Joao to our team as we strategically grow our investment platform," Adamson said. "They will play a key role as we continue to identify opportunities to create value for our partners in great live-work-play locations across the United States."

Huber joined Atco in 2013 as an acquisitions associate, focusing on its Sponsor Capital Fund. Before that he worked as a senior analyst at Wells Hill Partners. Huber is a graduate of Fordham University with a bachelor's degree in finance and mathematics and a Master's Degree in real estate finance from New York University.

Casimiro most recently served as vice president of acquisitions for TRX Investments in Miami, leading all aspects of the acquisitions process for the company from sourcing and due diligence to analysis, structuring, capital and budgeting. Before that he was with ARC Capital Partners in Los Angeles. Casimiro graduated from Instituto Superior Tecnico with a civil engineering license, earning his MBA in real estate finance from the UCLA Anderson School of Management.
